The Berry Street Education Model (BSEM) is based on classroom strategies informed by approaches to trauma-informed learning and the science of wellbeing. It has been designed by teachers and education leaders for whole school staff. To date over 18,000 Australian school teachers from more than 800 schools undertook the BSEM program including all the state junior secondary colleges in Bendigo.

Assemblies can now be conducted face to face for staff and students only but we are going to continue to conduct them digitally for the remaining three weeks of term.

Kindergarten to school transition activities -Kindergarten to school transition activities are permitted, but group sizes should not exceed public gathering limits. This will mean that Orientation Day will now be permitted.

Drinking fountains-The use of drinking fountains in schools is now permitted.

End of School will revert to 3:30pm for all students from Monday 30th November. Families are required to maintain 1.5 metres between each other as far as is practical.

School visits- Limitations on who can visit school premises no longer apply. This means parents can be welcomed back on site, for example for school drop-offs and pick-ups.

- The Berry Street Education Model (BSEM) is based on classroom strategies informed by Berry Street's approaches to trauma-informed learning and the science of wellbeing. It has been designed by teachers and education leaders for whole school staff. We know that all students, particularly our vulnerable students need strategies to increase their wellbeing towards academic success.

To date over 18,000 Australian school teachers from more than 800 schools undertook the BSEM program. In addition, AusVELs data at the primary school where BSEM was piloted, suggested that the program contributed to more than two years learning in one academic year.

They are all about strategies and recognise the importance of strategies which are consistent across an entire school. These student-centred strategies provide teachers, leaders, and allied education professionals with the knowledge of how to foster student willingness and capacity for school achievement. Throughout our training, they provide a robust toolkit of strategies that:

- Teachers can implement with students; and
- Ensure a consistent approach to implementation, teacher feedback and support.

BSEM will help to prepare teachers to meet the needs of vulnerable students by:

- understanding the impacts of trauma on the child, the family, and the intergenerational systems that surround the child,
- considering the effects of vicarious trauma, and
- exercising a multidisciplinary approach to the role of the teacher in the trauma-informed classroom, and to their therapeutic relationship with the child.
